

At the start of 2016, Jumping Mouse Children's Center celebrated the results of a three-year process of intentional growth. In response to the unmet need for children's mental health therapy in East Jefferson County, our board, staff, and community joined hands to double our services to local kids and their families. With increased staffing, space, and financial support, Jumping Mouse now has the capacity to provide long-term, weekly, expressive mental health therapy for up to 100 individual children, along with support for their parents, caregivers, and other important adults in their lives.

Our responsibility now is to sustain our work with these vulnerable children, to support their caregivers and advocates, and to ensure that Jumping Mouse is here to stay.

To that end, our current strategic plan identifies three priorities to foster stability and longevity. Developed by Jumping Mouse staff and board, with the help of facilitator Beroz Ferrell, our 2016-2018 focus areas sustain our core values and the people – kids and community – who bring these values to life.

With the plan as our interactive map, Jumping Mouse staff and board review progress regularly and frequently. We develop annual work plans for each strategic priority, with objectives summarized in a one-page dashboard, enabling us to recognize and respond to accomplishments and challenges. And each January, we retreat together to review results, correct course as needed, and affirm the plan for the coming year.

From 2016-2018, Jumping Mouse will focus on three strategic priorities:

Community Investment: increasing and deepening community investment in Jumping Mouse to support our new service level and shift how our culture cares for children and families.

Clinic Programs: continuing to serve 90-100 children weekly, along with their parents and caregivers, while developing strong community support for our families.

Sustaining our Staff: supporting and developing our team for healthy, stable, long-term capacity.

Core Values

Child focus: We serve children ages two to twelve and provide each child a safe environment. The therapy is led by the child's needs and proceeds at the child's pace.

Relationship: Our method is non-directive, within a reliable structure. Our therapists provide each child with reliable intimacy, and the child's relationship with her therapist is open-ended and long-term.

Accessibility: There are no set financial requirements for a child to enter therapy.

Sustainability: We request donations and remain independent of funding sources that compromise our vision or mission. We are financially sound and maintain a positive working environment.
